Dr. Rino Burkhardt runs a private clinic in Zurich, Switzerland, limited to periodontology and implantology.

He holds an associate professorship at the University of Zurich and honorary professorship at the University of Hong Kong.

In the early nineties, he was one of the first clinicians who introduced microsurgical techniques in periodontics. Today, he is a leading expert in this field with a clinical experience of more than two decades.

Beyond his clinical activities, he actively participates in clinical research related to wound healing, periodontal regeneration and skills evaluation. He has authored several articles and book chapters about the aforementioned topics.
